Foreword

Auget Largiendo (Latin): "One Grows by Sharing."

Upon completion of these three years at our Alma Mater, each of us receives a small gold pin inscribed with these words: "Auget Largiendo" . . . words of advice, of counsel, a maxim by which we as nurses can and should live.

For in truth, through the unlimited opportunities which are open to us, we do find a chance to grow to a fuller and richer life by sharing our knowledge, our abilities, and ourselves.

This 1962 TRES ANNI can but show a part of our opportunities to share. One cannot take a picture of or describe in words the art of sharing. Time and place are given, suggestions made, but from here you must continue. Only you can give of yourself; with this comes the growth of a new and better world--a new and better you.

As you look upon these pages, think how you may best GROW BY SHARING. The opportunities are unlimited!

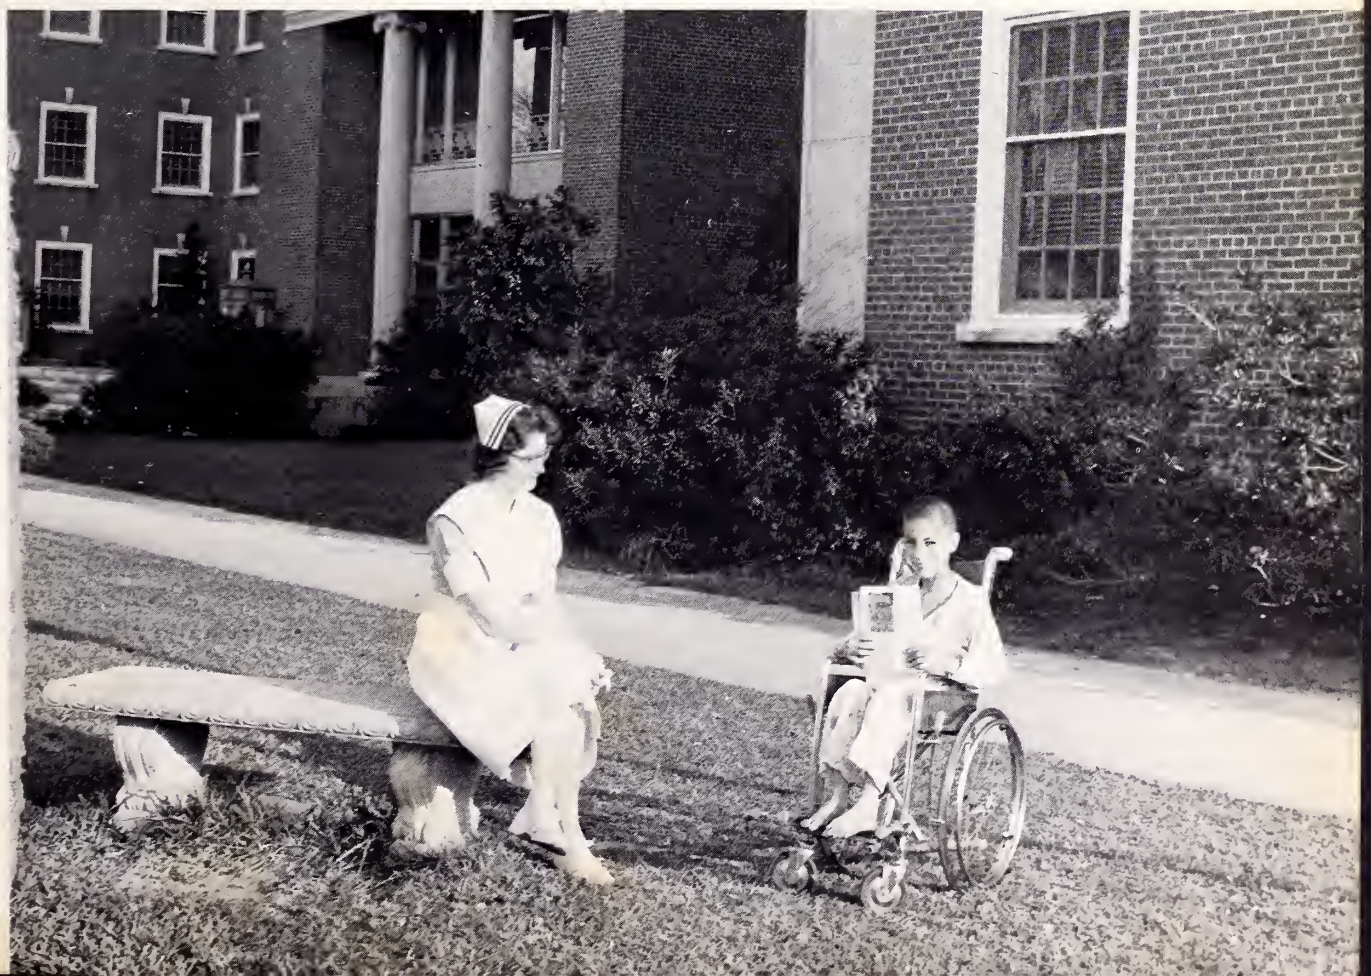
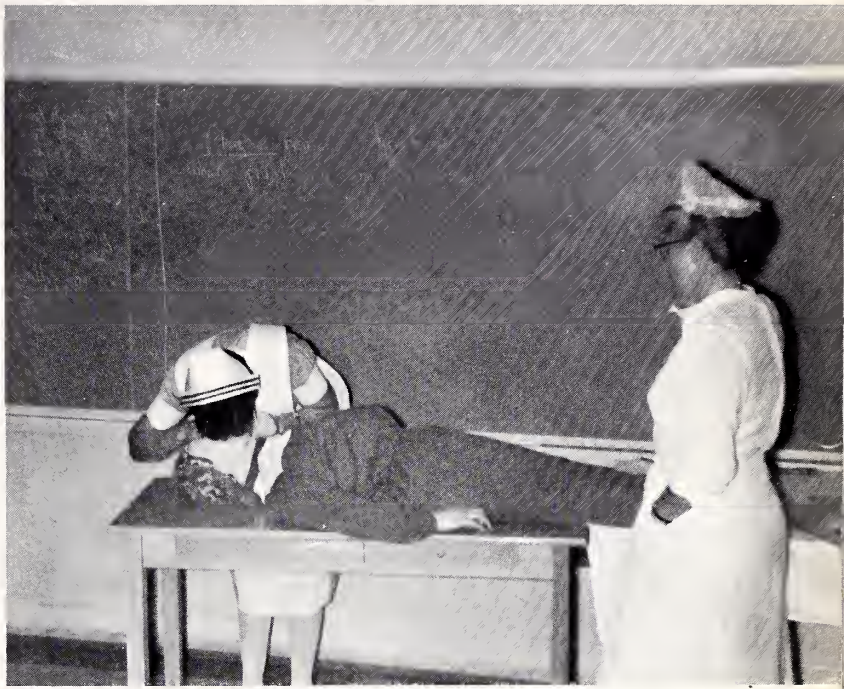
We grow through sharing. Sharing is giving unselfishly of yourself, your time and your talents. As a nurse you share the most personal, the most abundant thing in your life; you share your love with others; strangers perhaps, but people very much in need of this vital power. Love is something that cost nothing to give and requires only the giver's humble spirit and desire to share.

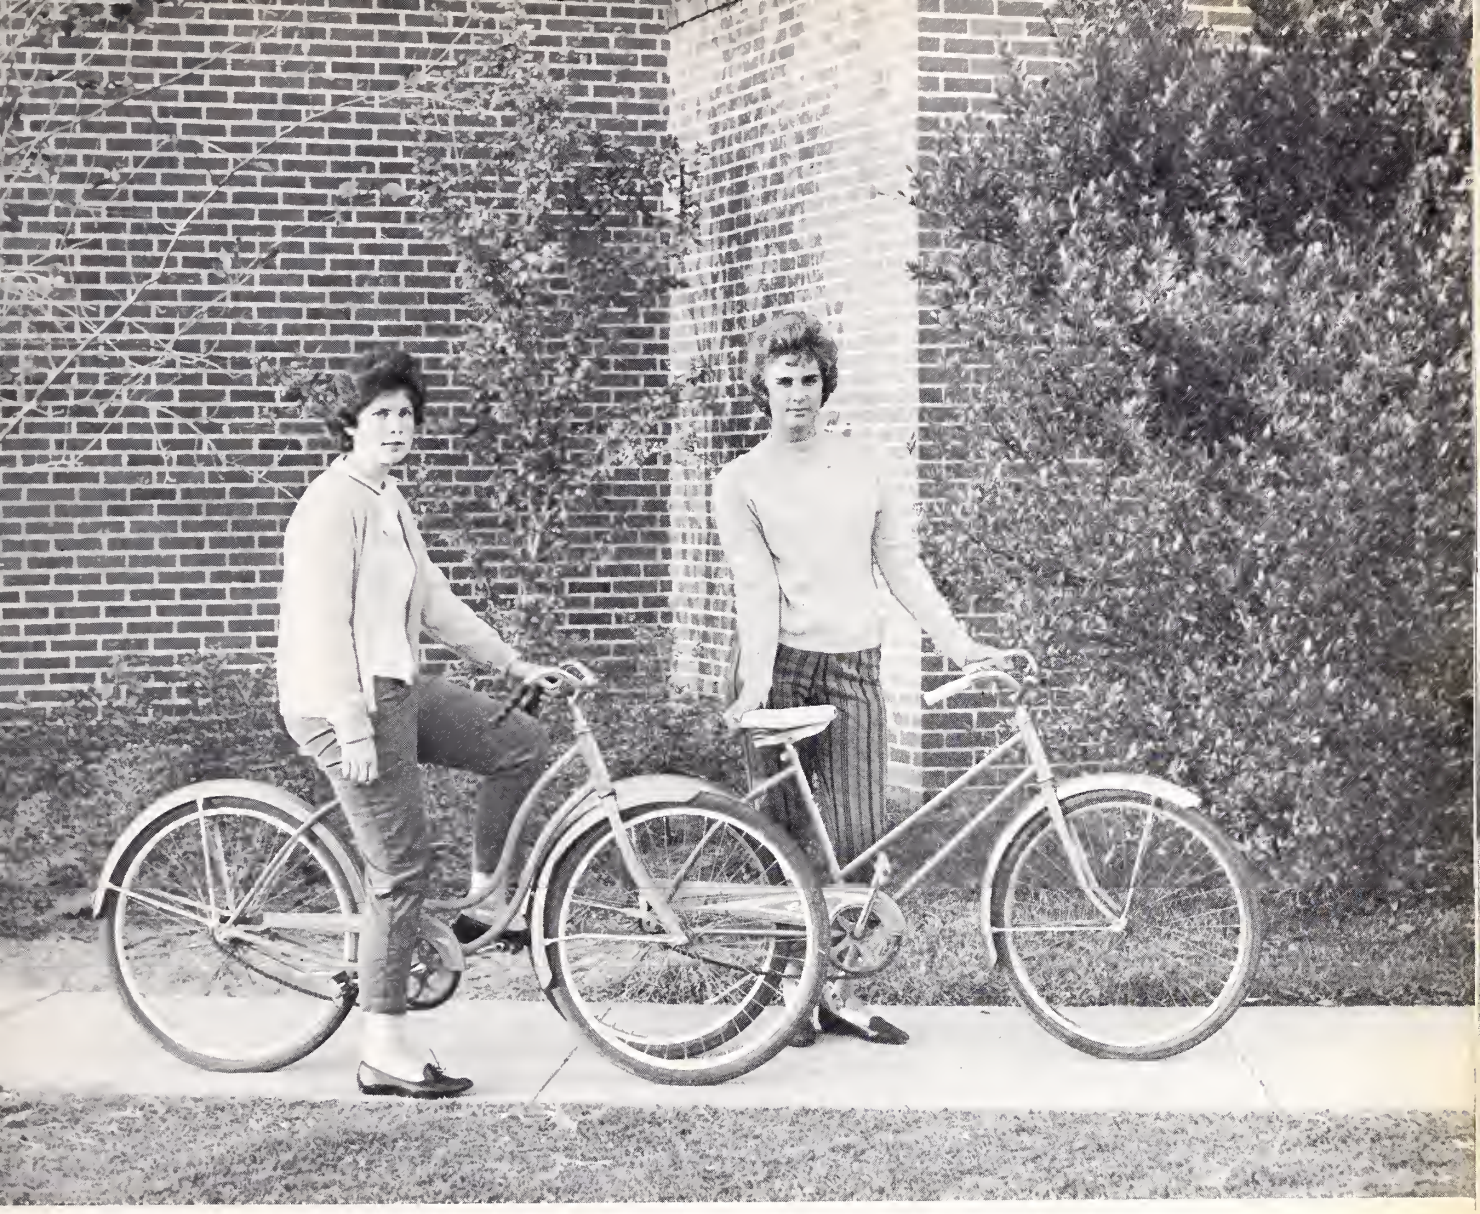
A welcomed back rub, a straightened pillow, a concerned inquiry, a friendly and reassuring smile. Yes, these are small things that mean so much.



Many long hours of studying in the library, of writing reports, and working on care studies--rushed and pushed for time--but somehow getting everything done and passing the course . . . these are some of the many ways we add to our knowledge of good nursing care. Physicians, graduates, and instructors share with us their knowledge and help us to learn and to gain self-confidence as we work toward our goal.



New dance steps, dates, parties, exhilarating bike rides, bridge and listening to records are some of our usual methods of relaxation and recreation. All of this is more fun because we do it together and share with each other our laughter and good times.



Participation in the religious activities at the School of Nursing is an important part of every student's life. Whether it is a planned meeting, an inspiring devotional, or a moment of quiet prayer, sharing our knowledge of Christ with others guides us to higher levels of spiritual understanding.

Our faith in God is further strengthened in our daily work, for we have many opportunities to know the love and comfort of the Great Physician.

Dedication

As we walk through the halls of the Medical College Hospital, we spot a familiar figure in a white lab coat hurrying down the corridor, making "grand rounds", or holding conferences with numerous students and doctors. To many of us he is only a well-known doctor, the Dean of Clinical Medicine and Medical Director of our hospital.

To those who have the privilege of knowing him well, he is much more than this. Here is a "down to earth", truly dedicated man who is deeply interested in all of the medical profession, but only those who know him well, realize how far-reaching are his concerns. Patient and tolerant, he not only listens but does all in his power to help and support whole-heartedly that in which he believes. This is a doctor who is the epitome of patience and goodness, of dedication and devotion.

In tribute to these qualities and the example you have set for your profession--to you, Dr. Vince Moseley, we dedicate this the 1962 TRES ANNI.

Dr. Vince Moseley

The growth of a student is directly influenced by the interest and leadership of the administration and faculty. They serve as the examples through which we gain the desire to know more about this new world we have entered. With the help of these people we learn to share with others the knowledge and skills we have acquired.

Each of our five housemothers has become a familiar sight as they supervise to see that things run smoothly at the School of Nursing. At least one of them is on duty during all hours of the day and evening to perform the routines of giving out mail, sorting uniforms, seeing that linen is distributed, and handling any problems which may arise.

Throughout our three years of school we experience various aspects of nursing and earn the right to work as a member of the health team. As we share our knowledge and perfect our skills we realize the importance of our profession. Each type of nursing is unique, but basic to all is the fact that the patient is our main concern.

Surgery

While working with surgical patients on the floors, in the operating room, or recovery room, we learn how surgical procedures can correct conditions which impair the body's function and how advanced techniques allow patients with chronic or incurable diseases a longer and more useful life.

Preparing the patient for surgery, both physically and emotionally is an important nursing function. Gaining the confidence of the patient and his family will alleviate anxiety and make him a better surgical risk.

Our duty in the operating room is to assist the surgeon; here we see the surgical treatment of the conditions and disease entities which we cared for on the floor and studied in our formal classes.

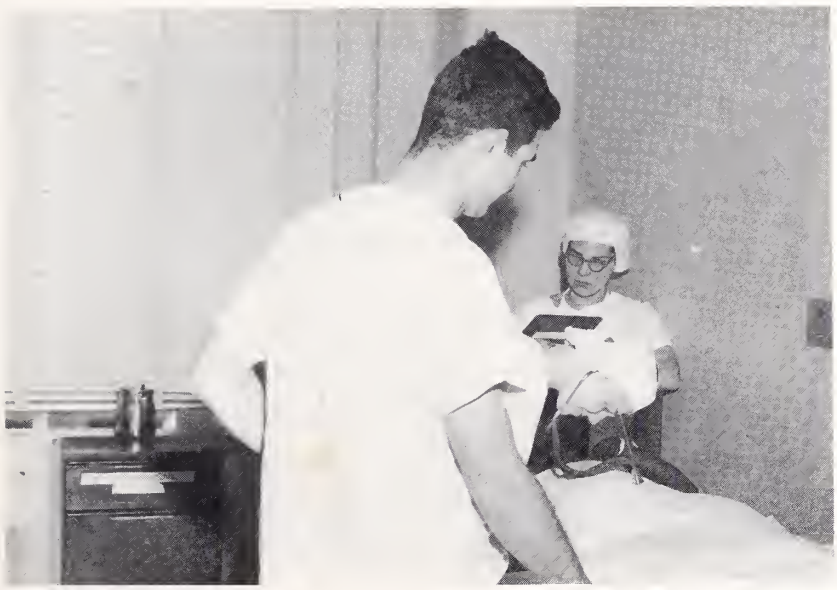
The recovery room nurse checks, observes, and rechecks the patient giving intense care during the critical hours immediately following surgery. After discharge from the recovery room the patient is taken to the floor where he is still checked frequently and observed closely for any signs or symptoms which may indicate complications.

Medicine

Observation and encouragement are necessities in the care of medical patients. Their conditions often require bedrest, a long hospitalization, many medications, diagnostic studies, and close observance for the appearance and recession of signs and symptoms.

Good nursing includes backrubs, a friendly chat, a cherry smile or a simple explanation of what, why and how a procedure is to be carried out.

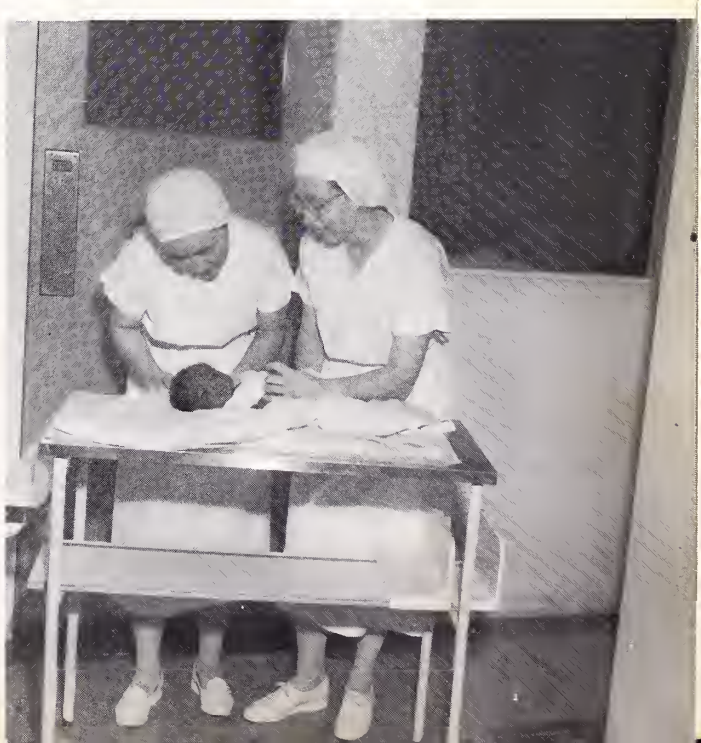
Perhaps there tasks seem trivial to us, but they are of utmost importance in providing total nursing care.



Obstetrics

Obstetrical nursing affords the best opportunity to observe the total plan for patient care. We follow the patient from the first clinic visit, through her hospitalization, and through visits with the public health nurse after discharge.

Instruction for self-care is important throughout the period in which the patient is followed in order to insure continued health of mother and infant.



Pediatrics

Separating a child from his parents, always a difficult process, is more so when that child is ill. Pediatric nursing consists of giving a great deal of one's self to reassure and comfort the child and his parents. Here the nurse has a greater responsibility for her patients emotional as well as his physical well-being.

The service given to children brings its own unique rewards and even a small amount of affection and kindness will be doubly returned.

Emergency Room

All types of injuries are cared for and treated in the emergency room. Ones' skills are tested here and the ability to think and act quickly is important.

The smallest symptom often is a key to the nature of the problem and the alertness of all personnel may save many lives. Carrying out doctor's orders quickly and competently is necessary for the teamwork which makes it possible to care for the ill and injured.

Clinic

The Medical College has a complete outpatient clinic program. These clinics play a major role in maintaining good community health.

Teaching is emphasized in all phases of clinic work with interviews, home visits, and classes. Through these services the patients and the community benefit.

Public Health

One way of helping others in the community is by home visiting, assisting with clinics and health education classes in the public health field.

The skills needed in this area encompass nearly all aspects of nursing and a nurse must be not only a nurse but a friend, confidante, and teacher as well.

To those who choose this work comes great satisfaction in seeing a healthy community about them.

Pinehaven

Pinehaven is a hospital that is especially designed for the care of patients with tuberculosis. Its well planned program of rest, careful observation, good nutrition and chemotherapy provide the best conditions for recovery.

One of our major roles in tuberculosis nursing is to give emotional support as well as physical care to these patients who are often confined to the hospital for long periods of time.

Psychiatry

This is a little city all of its own and the population of this city constitutes the United States's number one health problem--mental illness. It is also one of the greatest nursing challenges that we need to meet, helping these people resolve their emotional turmoils by teaching them better methods of meeting the demands of life.

Patience and a sincere interest in the person as an individual are requirements of a good psychiatric nurse. Her greatest reward is to see an emotionally disturbed person leaving the hospital with renewed hope and faith in themselves and their fellow men.

Nutritive Therapy

Nutrition plays an important part in everyone's life. We learn the value of a good, well-balanced diet as well as the importance of diet in many diseases. Learning proper preparation of foods and giving instructions to the patient about proper nutrition are necessary aspects of this part of our education.

The functions of our school which are portrayed in these pages form an indispensable part of our lives after working hours are over. Participation in these organizations affords relaxation and companionship with our fellow students--the pleasure of which is heightened with the knowledge that we are serving our classmates and our school.

South Carolina State Student Nurses' Association Convention

Charlotte Lesemann and Ann Bishop were our official voting delegates to convention.

In Greenville, South Carolina, November 1-3, 1961, student nurses from schools throughout the state met for the South Carolina Student Nurses' Association Convention. At this time the program of the past year was reviewed and plans were proposed to promote better unity between the many nursing schools in South Carolina. Plans were made for better organized districts so that closer interaction and sharing among students would be possible.

For three days fun, frolic, and fellowship were intertwined with meetings, lectures, and other business. At last on Friday, November 3, the convention ended and the girls returned to school full of happy memories and plans for next year.

The "Tres Anni" Staff At Work

This year the "Tres Anni" Staff held weekly meetings in the Alumni Room where the final plans and decisions for the annual were made.

The "Tres Anni" Staff sponsors two informal dances such as this to boost it's budget.

Much was accomplished in the work sessions held on first floor, where we had ample space to work. This made meeting our deadlines much easier than in previous years.

A NURSE TALKS WITH GOD.

Dear God, my work was difficult today. I'm tired, very tired. I almost forgot those objectives which I promised that I would always strive to remember. Therefore, I'm turning to you for my strength.

Help me to know, Father, that through my actions, thoughts, and words I am constantly influencing those about me. Let me always be kind to those less fortunate than I. Let my hands be used in gentle ways for your service. Let my thoughts be always of others. Let my words be words of wisdom, hope, and comfort.

Help me, God, to keep in my heart the confidences that my patients have sought fit to bestow, and may I never knowingly bring harm.

May I realize that every human life is sacred so that I may do all in my power to preserve the life that is borne to man. I realize that I may not be able to accomplish these tasks alone, and so I pray that I will maintain a desire to aid other members of the medical profession with fidelity and devotion.

Dear God, give me strength, so that through me, others may find that strength which is manifest in you. Amen.

A Christmas Party for underprivileged children was given by the Methodist groups of the Citadel and the Medical College.

Informal parties such as this add variety to the M.S.M. program.

Spiritual growth, thought, and action is encouraged by the Baptist Student Union in it's members through deputations at various churches in the Charleston area, weekly worship services, and contribution to a summer mission program. All students at the Medical College are invited to participate and join in these activities.

The lemonade stand to welcome new students, the Thanksgiving breakfast, week-end retreats, the State Baptist Student Union Convention, Christmas caroling parties, and Christian fellowship are all a part of the program. The Baptist Student Union along with the Methodist Student Movement sponsors Religious Emphasis Week in the spring.

Social life is a vital part of the life of any group of students. In these pages are portrayed those who have helped make our social events full of fun and interest. Traditions also have a place in our life for they enable us to see the growth of our school and help us uphold the aims set by those who lived here before us.

Class History

September 8, 1959, was a memorable day for fifty-seven future student nurses, in spite of the rain. Filled with anticipation we moved our many suitcases, boxes, and other possessions into our rooms, where we met our roommates for the first time. Little did we realize that this was the beginning of our "growth through sharing." The "Big Sister-Little Sister" Party that night is one we will long remember.

Many of us had thought we knew how to make beds until the first room inspection, when certain notes were received indicating that we perhaps, needed a little more practice. Of course we were not punished for these offenses--at first!

Hurricane Gracie struck with all her fury that fall and we all learned how to use mops in a hurry. One of our classmates borrowed an umbrella from a very important member of our faculty, only to have it maliciously turned inside out by Gracie.

The majority of our time in September and October was spent getting used to the new routine of study hall, chemistry and anatomy classes, and practicing in the fundamentals lab. "That doll", as we skeptically called her at first soon became "Miss Chase" to us, and was then treated with great respect.

After long hours in the lab, we began taking care of real patients. It was an odd but wonderful feeling to be called "Nurse" for the first time. One of our conscientious students took excellent care of her patients and even went beyond this by decorating one of the bedside tables with a lovely silver flower vase. Somehow another student never did find the "sitz" to put into her patient's bath. Wonder why not?

March 4, 1960, was an awaited day for us all . . . . Capping!! Our big sisters placed a cap on each of our heads, and only one was put on backwards. We were rather proud of the fact that we were the first class in the history of our school to have every member capped.

The morning of March 11, brought snow . . . and a clinical pathology final; at lunchtime we celebrated by tossing snowballs and building our first snowman.

No one will forget the restrictions placed on our class for not adequately practicing the administration of medications, but after long and tedious hours of practice we were rewarded by being allowed to go out that week-end.

Summer arrived and brought with it the eight hour working day. In spite of this many of us managed to get nice tans as a result of being allowed to swim in the Alumni Pool. Rotations through the diet kitchen and operating room were begun. The operating room seemed a little frightening at first, especially after one of our classmates almost contaminated Dr. Thrower's open heart case--by fainting.

Fall arrived and with it came the responsibility of our first black stripe and the priviledge of having "little sisters". Special services and new classes became a part of our schedule and many times we felt rather "owl like" as we worked night duty and evenings.

Judy Bolin, Vice-President, took over the Student Government Association for the President who was in Columbia on her Psychiatric Affilication. Bonnie Bloom was selected "Miss Christmas Belle" at the formal dance that December.

Ruby Price honored us by winning the Talent Contest at the State Student Nurses' Association Convention with her reading of "Thirty Pieces of Silver".

Seniors . . . . How good this word sounded to the forty of us. Upon receiving our second stripe members of our class at home and at State celebrated with steak suppers.

Catherine Brailsford assumed the leadership of the Student Government Association that fall.

Money was needed for the Senior Christmas Dance and a transistor radio was raffled to the public. The dance was a big success and Gail Whitfield was crowned "Miss Christmas Belle".

The "Twist Craze" swept the nation and our school; this dance we perfected after our eight hours on duty.

College catalogues and diamonds were seen increasingly in certain rooms and the late hours we kept discussing our future plans now brought reprimands from our night watchman.

Who could believe it--In January we were allowed to smoke in the cafeterias and lounges in the hospital. Some of the graduates could hardly keep from staring--How smug we felt!

Spring arrived and with it Emergency Room, Clinic, Emergency Nursing Classes and Professional Adjustments. Having to use the stairs instead of the West elevator slowed us none at all, for now we had boundless energy as we looked forward to the day--June 7--GRADUATION.

We realize now the continuous process of "growth through sharing" that has been taking place during the past three years, preparing us for the day we would proudly wear the garment of service, humility, and honor --the uniform of a GRADUATE NURSE.

The growth of an annual is always partially dependent upon the support of its advertisers. The 1962 TRES ANNI deeply appreciates the support given it by the merchants of Charleston, without whose help this annual could not be.

The book you now hold is the product of almost a year's work on the part of the 1962 TRES ANNI staff. There were countless tasks such as raising the necessary funds, planning and laying out the pages themselves, and presenting the Miss Medical College Contest, but at last we emerged from beneath the mountains of rejected pictures and rewritten copy to present to you, a tangible symbol of the growth we have shared in 1962.

A large part of this year's staff was inexperienced, but they proved willing and as a result we had more staff participation and interest. The workshops we held proved to be the answer to the problem of how to meet our deadlines.

On behalf of the TRES ANNI staff, I would like to express our appreciation to Mr. Robert Brown, the medical illustrator for the hospital, for the help he has given us this year. He took time out from his many duties to take some excellent pictures for us.

Again this year our advisor, Miss Sue Lundy has managed to make herself indispensable. Her interest and enthusiastic assistance will always be remembered.

I would also like to thank the administration, the faculty, and the student body for the interest they have shown, and the encouragement they have given us. We feel that the TRES ANNI for this year will live up to their expectations and we hope it will meet with their approval.

And so, with mixed emotions. . . .relief, sorrow, joy, and pride, we present the TRES ANNI for 1962. We hope that we were able to capture the growth we have shared during this year and that it will serve as an inspiration for further GROWTH BY SHARING.
